Set Sail for School

Written by Daryl-Lynne Gottier

Illustrated by Gal Weizman

motley crew, and a bonus “Pirate Dictionary,” Set Sail for School is a giggle-filled read for little buccaneers.

Ahoy, mateys! Jack is off to school, but his school is no ordinary one!

From waking up in his hammock to learning his A, B... Arrrs!, every moment of Jack's day is full of pirate-y fun and surprises.

With rollicking verses and clever, pirate-themed “anti-rhymes” on each page, Set Sail for School turns the school day into a high-seas adventure!

Packed with bright illustrations, a motley crew, and a bonus “Pirate Dictionary,” Set Sail for School is a giggle-filled read for little buccaneers.

Daryl-Lynne Gottier has been published in Highlights for Children, Hopscotch, and Boys' Quest. In addition to working as a speech pathologist in elementary schools, she worked in a bookstore and a children's library. She lives in Central MA, and this is her first picture book. If Daryl was a pirate, her name would be Barnacle Book-BUILDER.

Gal Weizman has illustrated over 100 children's books. Her playful animated characters bounce through games and TV shows, sit on packaging, and live in books around the globe. If Gal was a pirate, her name would be Captain Ink-Stain. See Gal's work on Instagram @gal__weizman.

Me & Lavender

Written by Melody C. Peugh

Illustrated by Eve Farb

- ★ 2026 Ezra Jack Keats Award nominee
- ★ WY Buckaroo Book Award list 2026-27
- ★ Grand Prize Winner in SeasonsOfKidLit's 2025 Book Awards (Best Spring Books)
- ★ Kiddable Award 2025: Best Kid's Ebook (Gold)

When Lavender the stuffed elephant drops in to play, Ella is ready for fun – until she remembers that they need to stay tidy for Mommy's afternoon tea party. But quiet activities soon escalate to exciting ones, ending in a magnificent mud-pie mess! Will the playful pair get clean in time for tea?

"A sweet tribute to youthful creativity." –Kirkus Reviews

"a delightful story about playtime....entertaining, playful, and imaginative." –Edwards Book Club

"...original, delightful, kid friendly, and fun...unreservedly recommended...." –Children's Bookwatch

When Lavender spotted the long garden hose,
he grandly announced,
"Look! I've got one of those!"
The battle was fierce.
We were soaked head to toes.
Soggy Lavender.

Melody C. Peugh (pronounced Pew) worked at Hallmark Cards and Sears Roebuck, was a Girl Scout leader and 4H leader, and enjoys gardening, fairy hunts with her granddaughters, and broadening young minds. She lives in Peabody, KS, and this is her first picture book.

Eve Farb is a psychologist whose passion is drawing. She has illustrated five picture books in Russian, as well as the well-received Clovis Keeps His Cool. See Eve's work on Instagram @eve_farb.

Ages 4–8, 32 full-color pages. Hardcover, 10¼" x 10¼", $18.95, May 2025
ISBN: HC 9781962269230 / Ebook 9781962269032

Celebrate the joy of pretending!

An elephant dropped in this morning to play,
bouncing me high off the bed where I lay.
He wasn't quite purple. He wasn't quite gray.
He was... Lavender!

We shared a fun breakfast of pancakes galore.

I splashed in the bath
as I scrubbed myself clean.
My bubble bouffant
was the best ever seen.
My elephant bathed
in the washing machine.
Sudsy Lavender.

- ★ Emmy nomination for “Outstanding Children’s Personality” for actress June Squibb’s reading of So Much Slime on Storyline Online
- ★ NY Reads, Elementary School Titles
- ★ Kiddable Award 2024: Best Kid’s Ebook (Bronze)

“Original, unique, imaginative, activity-inspiring, fun and funny from start to finish.” –Children’s Bookwatch

“I love this book because it tells me that even if... something goes wrong – with help, with friends, with teachers, with mothers and dads – you can make them alright.” –June Squibb, Academy Award-nominated actress (on Storyline Online)

“So Much Slime... shows children the importance of perseverance and ingenuity....”
–Courtney B. Vance, SAG-AFTRA Foundation President and Chairman, as quoted in PEOPLE Magazine online

Slime is spectacular!

“Oh, no!” I shout. “I forgot to bring saline! That’s what turns this stuff into slime!
I can’t make slime without saline!”

“You forgot the saline?!” my teacher squawks. “I don’t have any saline!”

This is bad. My demo is doomed. Instead of squishy slime,
I’m up to my wrists in an icky, sticky swamp!

“How will I ever clean this up?” I groan.

“Something from the art closet might help,”
Grace suggests.

Jason Lefebvre is Assistant Director of the Holyoke Public Library and was formerly a preschool paraprofessional and children’s librarian. He is the author of Too Much Glue and So Much Slime. He lives in Holyoke, MA.

Zac Retz is an art director and production designer in the entertainment industry who has worked for Disney, DreamWorks, Netflix, Illumination, and Sony. His movies include Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse, Encanto, Scoob! and many more. Zac runs his own studio, Impetus Animation, and is the illustrator of Too Much Glue and So Much Slime. "This uplifting, reassuring story is about warm friendship and about being seen—literally—and accepted for who you are. ...should boost the esteem of kids nervous about getting their first pair of glasses." —Kirkus Reviews

"...details an important rite of passage for many children, and could be especially useful for parents helping their child navigate wearing glasses." —School Library Journal

"...a wonderful, thought-provoking book celebrating friendship and individuality..." —The Picture Book Buzz

"Carla's Glasses is perfect for...anyone who doesn't want to stand out like the giant letter 'E' on the eye chart, but can appreciate a friend who does." —Emily Schneider, educator, writer, and blogger on Imaginary Elevators

Carla likes to stand out. Buster likes to blend in!

Debbie Herman is the author of Carla's Glasses, Carla's Sandwich, and other books for children. She's a writer, editor, and former elementary school teacher. Like Carla, Debbie is a fan of funky frames. She lives in Chicago, IL.

Sheila Bailey is the illustrator of Carla's Glasses, Carla's Sandwich, and many other children's books. She is a firefighter on Sauvie Island near Portland, OR, and has 19 pairs of reading glasses strewn about her house.

"Hi, Carla!" said the nurse. "Please face the chart and cover your right eye. Now read this row of letters."
"EDFCZP," read Carla. "That was easy."
"Terrific," said the nurse. "Please continue."

Carla read the next row and the next. "Hmm...it's getting tricky. Is that a C or a G? I'll go with C."
"Great," said the nurse. "Now cover your left eye and we'll start again." After a few more tests, the nurse handed Carla an eyeball sticker. "Nice job," she said. "Thanks!" said Carla, and she skipped back to her seat.

"My glasses make me look like an insect!" said Marcus.

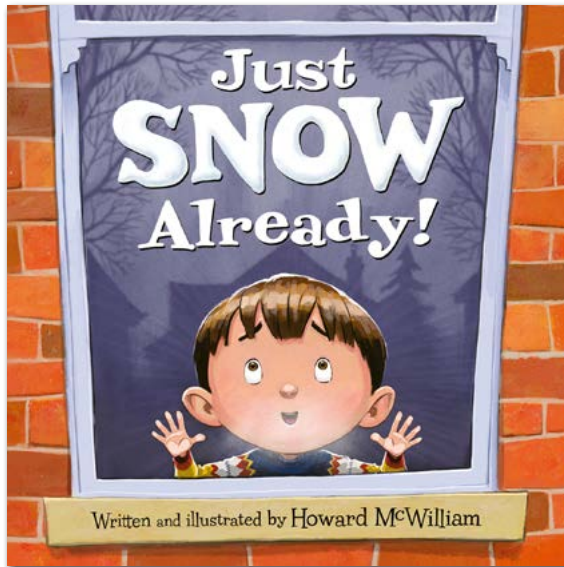

"I'm bursting with butterflies!" called Lottie.

"And I'm a flower garden," said Ms. Pimento.

"The cadences of a familiar nursery rhyme introduce concerns about ocean garbage and what we, who made the mess, can do to help clean it up." —Kirkus Reviews

"...outstanding.... sure to inspire...." —Cleaner Ocean Foundation

Michelle Lord has written several books for children including A Song for Cambodia, Nature Recycles, and Animal School: What Class Are You?, which received a starred review from Kirkus Reviews. She lives with her family in New Braunfels, TX.

Julia Blattman works as a visual development artist for animated feature films, and has created art for Disney mobile games. Julia lives in Los Angeles, CA, and this is her first picture book.

"But we are the ones who can save the day...."

"VERDICT: A successful addition in a growing genre of engaging picture books about pollution and environmentalism.

...a clear and realistic message to young readers in a surprisingly enjoyable package. ... Lord does not shy away from our collective responsibility to the earth's oceans and its animals. However, she ends on an uplifting note.

Comprehensive back matter elaborates on each of the repeated phrases, describing how each animal is affected by pollution, why plastics are particularly problematic, and ways that children can make a difference. This includes individual acts such as using reusable bags, but also collective actions toward systemic change.

Blattman's digital illustrations bring beauty and brightness to an otherwise heavy topic, without making light of the severity of the situation. The pieces of plastic look like neon-colored confetti, clearly standing out against the swirling natural blues and greens of the sea.

Through vibrant and immersive underwater views, readers can see a boat full of children observing the scenes below and, finally, working to clean up the waters." — School Library Journal

"...at once a wake-up call... a call to action.... a message of hope... [and] a promise for a healthier, happier tomorrow." — The Corner on Character

“The wonder of childhood comes alive...literally.”
–Kirkus Reviews

Jane Yolen is a writer of fantasy, science fiction, and children’s books, and the author or editor of over 400 books. These include Owl Moon, winner of the Caldecott award, and the How Do Dinosaurs Say Goodnight series. She lives in Western Massachusetts. There are two islands in Jane’s background: Manhattan Island where she spent her early years and the Isle of Skye in Scotland where she has spent much time over the past 30 summers. Either of these islands could have housed a giant.

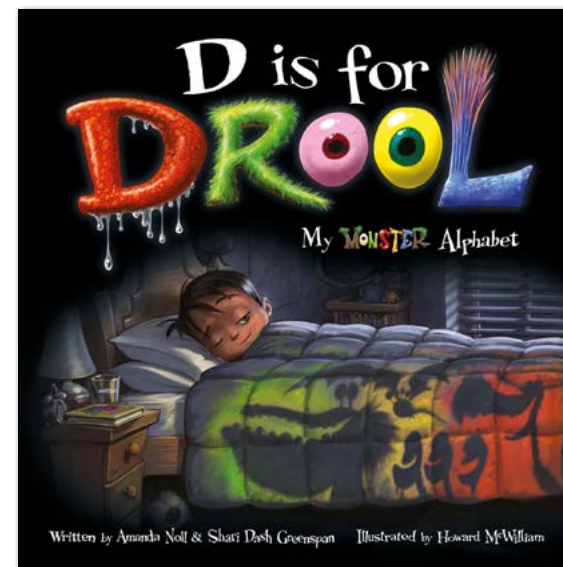

Doug Keith has over thirty years’ experience as an illustrator, designer, and fine artist. His resumé includes more than forty illustrated books, a Benjamin Franklin Award for interior design, a television Emmy award for graphic design, and commissioned works installed at Lewis-McChord Air Force Base and The University of Washington. Doug lives in Seattle, Washington, surrounded by the mountains and water which inspired Giant Island.

"The...monsters in McWilliam's toy-strewn bedroom scenes are show stealers, whether exuding pools of pink slime or rearing up in glowering, warty menace in vain efforts to get Emma into bed." –Kirkus Reviews

"Superior in style, liveliness, integrity and format...the vivid three-dimensional illustrations are truly amazing. This will not be a shelf-sitter." –Puget Sound Council for the Review of Children's Media

"Emma is cut from the same cloth as Boo from Monsters Inc. – she's tickled, not terrified, by the visiting monsters – and McWilliam's cinematic artwork embraces the comedy of the situation as Emma puts bracelets on the snakelike tail of one monster and jumps rope with the tentacles of another." –Publishers Weekly

"...a quirky bedtime story with plenty of good humor, thrills, and sibling exasperation. Bold and colorful, the illustrations by Howard McWilliam are reminiscent of Monsters, Inc., with their large, expressive eyes, gleeful movement, and hideously charming monsters." –Foreword Reviews

"Frightful and delightful." –Kirkus Reviews

"In this peppy prequel to I Need My Monster and Hey, That's MY Monster!, Noll and McWilliam reveal how Ethan, a child, chose Gabe as his personal monster when he was younger. Three other vividly hued monsters compete for the job...but only Gabe...clinches the role thanks to some secret weapons...which simultaneously give the boy shivers and lull him to sleep.

Like the text, McWilliam's brassy digital acrylics are more silly than scary, with the characters' wildly exaggerated facial expressions amplifying the comedy." –Publishers Weekly

"In this fun-loving tale, Ethan meets his match as Gabe the toe-loving monster takes up residence under his bed. Proving to be the perfect monster to keep this little guy in his bed, it's sure to bring some giggles and chuckles along the way." – Story Monsters Ink Shelf

Are You My Monster?

Written by Amanda Noll

Illustrated by Howard McWilliam

Littlest listeners can enjoy the topsy-turvy, under-the-bed world of I Need My Monster in this sturdy, age-appropriate board book.

Help Ethan compare his drawing to an assortment of amusing monsters. Do the colors match? Are their tails long or short? Are their nails pointy or round? Are their teeth big or small? Children will be thrilled when Ethan finds the perfect match – which turns out to be his beloved stuffed monster toy – just in time for bed.

"A young boy needs to find the monster in his drawing before he can go to sleep. Little ones will enjoy the parade of silly creatures he checks against his drawing, while also learning colors and matching. The sweet ending shows that even those with sharp teeth and scratchy claws can be cuddly, turning the monster-under-the-bed trope on its head." –School Library Journal, On the Boardwalk: Our picks for the best board books of the season

"The fun-loving, jubilant imaginary friend from When a Dragon Moves In is back in this stand-alone picture book.... Verdict: Readers will hope that this dragon keeps coming back." –SLJ

[McWilliam's] artwork has a sculptural depth and emotional vividness that, when combined with Moore's second-person narration, will make readers feel like they are right there with this growing family, through all of its messy, noisy, and tender moments." –Publishers Weekly

"...it turns out that castles of any sort, not just sand, attract dragons, so the soon-to-be-born baby's crib, with its crenellations and turrets at the corners, has an occupant even before mom gives birth.... the dragon is definitely the boy's release—his way of engaging in naughty behavior and then blaming it on the dragon—when it's tough to accept the new changes around the house that come with a baby. McWilliam's ...illustrations are wonderfully raucous and tongue-in-cheek, and his facial expressions are spot-on. It doesn't matter whether or not they can be seen; there's a little bit of dragon inside each of us." –Kirkus Reviews
